第二部分 阅读(共两节,满分 50 分)

第一节(共 15 小题;每小题 2.5 分,满分 37.5 分)

阅读下列短文,从每题所给的 A、B、C、D 四个选项中选出最佳选项。

A

The new year always brings predictions. You know who gets them right?

BLUETOOTH

In his futuristic 1953 novel Fahrenheit 451, Ray Bradbury anticipated Bluetooth, describing wireless earphones that allowed for “an electronic ocean of sound, of music and talk” to be transferred through the air. Imagine how thrilled he would have been with a Bluetooth toaster! That was the idea behind Griffin's Connected Toaster, which warned you via smartphone when your toast was done. At $100, this baby cost a lot of bread, which may be why it was discontinued just two years after launch.

SMART WATCH

The Apple Watch lets you chat, play games, and watch videos on a device fastened to your wrist. Cool, huh? The Jetsons thought so ... in 1962 — when Steve Jobs was still in second grade!

WI-FI

Nikola Tesla called it! In 1909, the famous electrical engineer told the New York Times, “It will soon be possible to send wireless messages all over the world so simply that any individual can carry and operate his own equipment.” No doubt he was thinking of the Kérastase Hair Coach brush, which measured brushing speed and employed a micro-phone to listen to your hair, all to compute an overall hair-quality score sent to your smartphone. (Alas, it too is gone.)

GPS

Writer Arthur C. Clarke (2001: A Space Odyssey) saw a world in which no one got lost. In 1956, he wrote that satellites “could make possible a position-finding grid (铁网) whereby anyone could locate himself by means of a couple of dials on an instrument about the size of a watch.” Clarke didn't mention that his system might also track another person, such as a criminal. Last year, the New York City police arrested a robber who was wearing a GPS ankle monitor — because he was still on probation (缓刑) for a prior crime.

21. Which of the predictions is the earliest?

A. BLUETOOTH.

B. SMART WATCH.

C. WI-FI.

D. GPS.

22. Why did Griffin's Connected Toaster disappear? A

A. Too expensive.

C. A little awkward.

B. Out of date.

D. Energy-consuming.

23. What was Clarke's prediction? A

A. A GPS ankle monitor.

B. A robber-arresting instrument.

C. A watch that could see the world.

D. An instrument that could locate a person.

I never thought I'd hear myself say it, but I've grown to enjoy lifting weights, and I've learned from doing it. I enjoy the sense of strength and discipline that comes when the muscles are forced to resist. I've tried varying schedules — lifting every day, every other day, two days on and a day off. The every day approach was the least effective. I get the best strengthening results when I give myself a break.

The same is true with mind and spirit. Without giving yourself a chance to reenergize, you begin to break down all the connective fibers of your life. I used to just give myself Sundays off. Now I'm scheduling downtime in the midst of everything — and "everything" includes two magazines, building a house in Hawaii, working on an ABC movie — and, oh yeah, my day job. Keeping it all straight was beginning to feel a little stressful. So I told myself that just because I have ten free minutes on my calendar doesn't mean I want to fill them. Breathing space has to become part of my daily routine.

So instead of having people lined up outside my office after the first show — I tape two a day — I do nothing for at least ten minutes. The change has worked wonders. I have more energy, and I'm in a better mood for the second show and all the business that comes afterward.

Now that I have the summer off to sit under the trees reading, napping, writing, and thinking, I know for sure it's time well spent. I'm refilling my tank so that by fall, when the new season begins, I'll be fired up and ready for whatever is to come. Fully restored.

24. What is the function of the first paragraph? D

A. To arouse the readers' concern.

B. To summarize the whole passage.

C. To state the importance of a good lifestyle.

D. To introduce the theme of the whole passage.

25. Which of the following does the author agree with?
- A. Keeping everything straight.
B. Resting at any time.
C. Taking breaks between tasks.
D. Having a full schedule.
26. What does the underlined "it" in Para.2 refer to?
- A. Everything.
B. Building a house.
C. My day job.
D. Working on a movie.
27. What is the main idea of the passage?
- A. Lifting weights changes people's life.
B. A little restoration helps go a long way.
C. Why people need to be in high spirits.
D. 'Ten minutes' break will work wonders.

The Maya city of Tikal is famous for its amazing palaces and temples. But something far more ordinary kept Tikal functioning: its water-purifying(净化) system, the earliest known of its kind.

Researchers recently discovered a volcanic mineral that traps microbes(微生物) and heavy metals in Tikal's largest reservoir(水库). Because the material is not found nearby, the finding suggests the presence of a man-made water-purifying device.

The finding denies the long-standing idea that the ancient world's technological achievements belonged to the Eastern world, like Egypt, and China. The leading scientist of this research, Kenneth Tankersley says, "When talking about purifying water, the Maya were thousands of years ahead."

Located in the forests of Central America, Tikal, is thought to have been home to more than 45,000 people. They had to struggle against a dry season lasting from November through April. Storing water in reservoirs was a solution, but that water had to be fit to drink, said Kenneth, "Keeping water clean was of great importance."

A few years ago, the researchers were surprised to find that the largest reservoir, Corriental, had significantly fewer harmful chemicals than the others. "The water quality at Corriental was much higher."

Somehow the Maya must have been purifying Corriental's water, the team assumed. "The Maya used gardens as their bathrooms," Kenneth said, "The water coming into the reservoir would not have been very clean."

At the bottom of Corriental, scientists found four separate layers(层), each a few centimeters thick, of millimeter-scale "zeolites(沸石)." This type of volcanic mineral can purify water and is still in widespread use today, Kenneth says, "Just about everything we drink, from bottled water to wine, runs through a zeolite purifying device."

The Maya wouldn't have known about the zeolite in rock, but they would have recognized the purifying effects, the researchers suggest. A zeolite-rich rock formation about 30 kilometers northeast of Tikal is the likely source of the material in Corriental reservoir, the team said last month in Scientific Reports. Water at this site "was clear and tasted good."

28. What did the researchers find?
- A. A new material called zeolites. ☒ C
B. The purifying effects of zeolites.
C. An old water-purifying system.
D. High-quality water in Corriental.
29. How did the Maya purify water?
- A. By building the largest reservoir. ☒ B
B. By using gardens as their bathrooms.
C. By getting rid of heavy metals.
D. By spreading four layers of zeolites.
30. What can we learn from the research?
- A. The Maya drank bottled water. ☒ D
B. The ancient Maya were very bright.
C. The system was created by accident.
D. The zeolites were found in Corriental.
31. According to Kenneth, _____. ☒ C
- A. the original water in Corriental was not clean enough
B. water supply in Tikal lasted from November to April
C. all ancient technological achievements belonged to the East
D. the Maya had a good understanding of the zeolite in rocks

D

Can a fish be depressed? This question has been on my head ever since I spent a night in a hotel across from a sad-looking fish. His name was Bruce Lee.

The pleasant woman at the front desk assured me that he was well taken care of. Was I incorrectly assuming his laziness was a sign of being upset?

When I sought answers from scientists, I assumed that they would find the question ridiculous. But they did not. New research has been totally shifting the way that scientists think about fish cognition (认知), building a case that pet and owner are not nearly as different as many assume. The neurochemistry (神经化学) is so similar that it's scary, said Julian Pittman, a professor. We tend to think of them as simple living things, but there is a lot we don't give fish credit for.

Dr. Pittman likes working with fish, in part, because they are so obvious about their depression. A zebrafish gets dropped in a new tank. If after five minutes it is hanging out in the lower half, it's depressed. If it's swimming up top, then it's not.

Is depression the right word? There's the obvious issue that we cannot ask animals how they feel, says Dr. Diego A. Pizzagali. Neither fish nor rats can catch the entire range of depression as we know it.

There is a heated debate about whether anxious or depressed is a more appropriate term. But what has convinced Dr. Pittman, and others, over the past ten years is watching the way the zebrafish lose interest in just about everything: food, toys, exploration, just like clinically depressed people who are withdrawn. The same is true of fish.

One of the things we're finding is that fish are naturally curious and seek novel things out, said Dr. Braithwaite. In other words, your goldfish is probably bored. To help get rid of depression, she urges introducing new objects to the tank or switching up the location of items.

32. What is Paragraph 3 mainly about? D

- A. Fish are considered simple living things.
- ☒ B. Pet and owner are always assumed the same.
- ☒ C. Scientists have learnt a lot about fish cognition.
- D. Fish and human beings have something in common.

33. What does the underlined word "withdrawn" in Paragraph 6 probably mean? C

- A. Quiet and shy.
- B. Happy and excited.
- C. Interested and careful.
- D. Disappointed and surprised.

34. Why can fish become bored according to the text? D

- A. They need oxygen from the air.
- B. They are not born to be curious.
- C. They lack new things to explore.
- D. They can't locate the positions of items.

35. What might be the best title for the text? A

- A. Fish Depression Is not a Joke.
- B. Fish Can Be a Boring Pet.
- C. Fish Need Better Care More.
- D. Fish Cognition Does not Exist.

Slash(斜杠) Careers

What is your job? Are you a teacher or a businessperson? Or maybe you are a lawyer/writer or a teacher/photographer. 36 The term "slash career" comes from the punctuation mark (标识符) — a slash that comes between job titles.

People with slash careers often have a primary job that provides for most of their needs. The primary job usually comes before the slash. 37 This secondary job can help supplement the person's income.

Why would anyone want more than one job? Some people look to their jobs for opportunities to develop their interests. But most people have too many interests for one job. Secondary jobs can be enjoyable if they include interests that the primary job doesn't touch. Some people who encourage slash careers say they actually help with work-life balance. 38

On the other hand, a slash career can be dangerous for work-life balance. 39 One might give up necessary things like relaxation, exercise or time with one's family. People with slash careers need to think carefully about how they use their time. This includes knowing when to stop working.

The clear advantage to slash careers is the extra income that secondary jobs provide. It's always helpful to have a little extra money to spend or to save.

40 With a slash career, losing one's job does not mean losing one's entire income. Or a secondary job may be so successful that it can turn into one's primary job.

If your interests stretch beyond your ordinary job, a slash career may work for you.

A. Slash careers provide extra money.

B. Slash careers also make one's life more stable.

C. Working more than one job can fill up all of your time.

D. If you have more than one job, you have a slash career.

E. It shows the person is creative and willing to work hard.

F. The job after the slash is often based on a person's interests.

G. That's because they can give people an opportunity to express themselves.

Early the next morning, the girls met at the jasmine bushes outside Shanti's house. Delicate white flowers surrounded them with fresh scent. They picked blossoms with their fingers and then sat under a mango tree, tying up the flowers into garlands. Shanti could already see herself hugging that beautiful doll.

"If we sell enough garlands, we can each get a doll," said Shanti.

Jodi shook her head. Her family was low on money that week. She had to use her money to pay for Kiran's medicine. Kiran was Jodi's little brother. Then Jodi picked up her garlands. "My mother is expecting me. I'll meet you at the market."

Shanti spent the afternoon selling garlands alone. By early evening, Shanti had sold all her flowers.

On the way home, Shanti saw Jodi heading to the market with her garlands. She was late because she had to watch Kiran while her mother was away.

"Why didn't you take him with you?" Shanti said.

Jodi shook her head. "He's too sick to go out. He coughs and coughs."

Shanti knew Jodi wouldn't make enough money for the medicine now. The market would be closing soon.

Shanti looked at the purse tightly held in her hand. It was supposed to be for the beautiful doll she'd been dreaming of for long. Then she looked at her friend's tired face. "Here. Keep this for the medicine."

That night Shanti cried, thinking about the doll. What if someone bought it before she'd saved up enough again?

Text 1

M: Hi Mary. I have an extra movie ticket. Would you like to go with me this Saturday?

W: Oh, I'd love to, but I promised my mother I would go over my lessons at home.

Text 2

W: What's the matter with Mike? He looks so tired.

M: He was informed his flight was delayed for four hours on his arrival at the airport. He finally took off at 1:00 a.m.

Text 3

W: Calm down! Calm down, Edward!

M: Their behavior is really unacceptable. There's a limit to what people can bear.

W: Yes, I know, but you shouldn't make a scene(大吵大闹) in public.

Text 4

M: The man is very famous in Europe, right?

W: Yes, but actually his songs and movies are not so good.

M: That's true. I once saw one of his movies; it's really boring.

Text 5

M: Lida, make sure you hand out the reports before I begin. And tell Betty Suarez to come in for an interview tomorrow morning.

W: OK, I'll call her up at once. And everyone present will have one copy of the reports before the meeting.

Text 6

M: Adele, what kind of books do you like to read?

W: Well, I like reading Russian novels because the greatest writers deal with people's daily life — why do we do the things we do, what do we do to realize our dreams, etc. What about you, Gary?

M: Well, at the moment I do so much background reading for my work as a translator. It helps me be exact in my job. Well, I used to enjoy science fiction. But now I don't particularly read for pleasure because I don't have the time.

Text 7

W: I'm sorry for being late. I left home early. But the traffic is getting increasingly crowded.

M: Well, it doesn't matter. Traffic jams in Shanghai are very common. For me, I'd like to take the subway. It saves a lot of time and money.

W: I can't agree with you more. I'll try it next time. Oh, I'm really a bit hungry.

M: You can have a look at the menu first.

W: Wow, everything looks absolutely delicious. My mouth is watering.

M: I've been here several times. The environment is quite clean.

W: Oh yes. The price is also reasonable.

Text 8

W: You're the new exchange student, Henry?

M: Yes, I am. Nice to meet you.

W: Nice to meet you, too. I am your student assistant, so I'm here to help answer any questions you may have. You arrived on Monday. Is that right?

M: Yes. Where will we go?

W: Right now, we're going to get you registered so that you can get your student card. It's as important as your passport or driver's license around here.

M: Passport? Oh, no! I don't have it. It's in my dorm.

W: Never mind. Okay, I've signed you in. Here is your student card. Keep it with you at all times. You'll need it for student purchases at the library, cafeteria, and other stuff.

M: Wow, that's great. Thanks a lot.

W: My pleasure. I'm going to help you find your books, and then on Wednesday morning, we have a student information meeting to attend.

M: Well, what's the exact time tomorrow morning?

W: It'll begin at ten o'clock prompt(准时地).

Text 9

W: What are you going to do over the winter break?

M: I'm taking a trip to Edinburgh to see my brother and his wife. They just had a baby, so I get to meet my nephew for the first time. He must be very lovely.

W: Wow! It must be exciting.

M: Yeah, I'm looking forward to it. What are you going to do?

W: My best friend and I are going on a road trip up to Canada. We're going to take the ferry from Vancouver to Victoria Island.

M: I've never been there.

W: I haven't, either. We're going to stay for about a week. I can't wait to explore the area. I've heard the island is really beautiful. There are a lot of old buildings and nice restaurants by the water. The whole city is connected to Wi-Fi, too.

M: That's impressive.

W: I wish we had two weeks off.

M: Yeah, two weeks is the perfect amount. If so, I'll be able to take a side trip(顺路) to Paris while I'm in Europe.

M: Now, it's time for our "What's on around Carlisle". There are lots of things happening. First of all, Lambly school has told us all about the concert they are giving on Saturday evening, that's the 9th. The music starts at 6:30 not at 6:00 as advertised, and will finish at 7:30. They say it's an evening of songs and dances for everyone. There'll be coffee and desserts offered afterwards. That will be included in the cost of the ticket. Do go along to this concert as the school will use all the money to buy some new sports equipment for the children. Last year's concert was a great success and the school was able to pay for a trip to London for the children.

Next, I have some information of a regular weekend activity. The Walking Club are going for a long-distance walk around the lake this Sunday. Everyone should meet at 10 a.m. in the car park by the lake. Have fun!

On Sunday evening, there's a talk for the International Club by a well-known local writer, Sarah Jones. I'm sure the evening will be very popular. So have a great time! OK, that's all for today. Thank you for your listening.
